Author and renowned South African historian Robert R. Edgar, Ph.D., discusses the power, courage, and strength of a black South African woman's fight against racism and sexism at the height of apartheid. A tireless activist, Josie Mpama/Palmer's heroic struggle for freedom inspires the ongoing fight for black lives today. Moderated by Krista Johnson, Ph.D., associate professor of African studies at Howard University

Presented in conjunction with the exhibition Heroes: Principles of African Greatness
